

Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.

Japanese Culture Reflected in the Language

A thesis presented in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Master of Arts in Japanese at Massey University

Mieko MacInnes

1997

Errata

- P.iii, L.14; "Though" should read "through".
- P.2, L.10; "They acquire" should read "they are to acquire".
- P.5, L.28; "Cord" should read "code".
- P.8, L.20; "Cord" should read "code".
- P.12, L.15; "The language" should read "Language".
- P.13, L.1; "Further more" should read "Furthermore".
- P.19, L.5; "Brown & Levinson" should read "Brown & Levinson's".
- L.8; "Save face of speaker" should read "save the face of the speaker".
- L.28; "Brown & Levioson's" should read "Brown & Levinson's".
- P.34, L.3; "Edward Hall's" should read "Edward Hall".
- P.43, L.1; "It" should read "it".
- P.75, L.13; "From the above examples [3.12d] illustrates" should read "The above examples [3.12d] illustrate".
- P.78, L.18; "Have" should read "has".
- P.81, L.27; "Depending upon the sex of the speaker defines the final particles" should read " The final particle normally suggests the sex of the speaker".
- P.86, L.20; "Itedaita" should read "itadaita".
- P.89, L.1; "Nigage" should read "nigate".
- P.92, L.20; "Indicates" should read "indicate".
- P.103, L.20; "Students" should read "students' ".
- P.109, L.23; "Rather" should read "rather than".
- P.124, L.9; "Sawyer and Smith's" should read "Sawyer and Smith".

ABSTRACT

Culture and language have influenced each other as they have evolved! Should this statement be correct, then second language learning becomes second culture learning. However, this fact is not generally known by most second language teachers and students.

The focus of this study has been to examine how the Japanese culture is reflected in the language, and to demonstrate how cultural aspects can be accommodated in the learning environment. The teaching method used is called "Interactive Competence Approach" which integrates sociocultural competence with linguistic and communicative competence, while giving students an awareness, that learning the Japanese language is also learning its culture. The most effective method of cross-cultural training, "cultural assimilator" is employed to increase students' competence.

The relationship between Japanese language and society is best illustrated in the use of politeness, especially honorifics. They are the core of Japanese polite expressions and reflect vertical and uchi/soto (in-group and out-group) social dimensions. This vertical and group oriented society is the reflection of the concept of "ie", a basic family unit. Ellipses and indirect expressions are also well-developed to consider other people's feelings and avoid confrontations. Therefore, using this style of language, it is natural then that the Japanese way of communication, which is often described as "implicit" and "indirect" has evolved.

Finally, two major suggestions are formed from integrating these observations and findings:

1. JSL teachers should place more emphasis on politeness in interactions, and honorifics should be simplified.
2. JSL teachers should assist students in improving cross-cultural competence thus enabling them to unravel any social differences while making their own personal adjustments.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I was fortunate to receive great help and advice from many people at every stage of this research.

First, I would like to express my most sincere appreciation to Professor Kiyoharu Ono, the Head of Department of East Asian Studies of Massey University, for his invaluable comments and most professional supervision as a highly competent researcher of Japanese linguistics. His continual encouragement right through this study from beginning to end has been deeply appreciated.

I gratefully acknowledge the most valuable advice given by his personal lectures and material provided by Professor Yoshinori Nuibe, the Department of Teaching Japanese as a Second Language, Hiroshima University. I have learned the value of cultural competence from his enthusiasm for stimulating students' personal development through his teaching.

I am also indebted Mr Kenzo Kitahara and Mr Takashi Sasaki, the researchers of Inter-cultural Communication Institute, Kanda University of International Studies, and Mr Hiroshi Yamakawa, the Head of Japanese Language Division, Kanda Institute of Foreign Languages. Their advice and the materials provided relating to inter-cultural communication were very helpful.

Sincere thanks to Mrs Etsuko Yatate, a devoted English teacher of global education in Tokyo. Her support for the survey conducted at Tokiwamatsu Gakuen High School greatly contributed to this research. Thanks are also due to Mrs Yatate's colleagues, students, and their parents, who answered the questionnaire. I have greatly benefited from the excellent advice of Mr David Parker and Dr Rick Dezoete. I also acknowledge the belief shown and support given to me by Mr Roger Stokell, a former Head of School of Languages, Auckland Institute of Technology.

Finally, I express deep appreciation to my husband, Ian for his constant encouragement, enormous support, and great understanding. Without the help of all these people, this study could never have been completed.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Abstract	ii
Acknowledgements	iii
Table of Contents	iv
List of figures, tables, diagrams	vii
Symbols and abbreviations	viii
INTRODUCTION	1
CHAPTER 1
THE LEARNING OF CULTURE AND LANGUAGE	3
1.1 Definition of culture	3
1.2 The language and culture connection	5
1.2.1 Which comes first - language or culture?	5
1.2.2 Sapir-Whorf hypothesis	6
1.3 Teaching methods of language and culture	9
1.4 Objectives of learning the culture and language	11
1.4.1 Second language and culture learning	11
1.4.2 Objectives of a second language class	12
CHAPTER 2
THE JAPANESE LANGUAGE, COMMUNICATION, AND CULTURE	14
2.1 Language, communication, and culture	14
2.2 Inherent aspect of Japanese language	16
2.2.1 Honorifics	17
2.2.1.1 Linguistic politeness	17
2.2.1.2 Politeness in interactions	21
2.2.2 Ellipses	24
2.2.2.1 Simply omitting words	24
2.2.2.2 Be incomplete - one of the strategies for doing face threatening acts (FTAs)	29
2.2.3 Summary	33

2.3	Inherent aspect of Japanese communication	33
2.3.1	Japanese communication style and mode of communication	34
2.3.2	Public and private self	37
2.3.3	Summary	38
2.4	Inherent aspect of Japanese culture	39
2.4.1	Island-nation, Japan (shimaguni, nippon)	39
2.4.2	Japanese society	43
2.4.2.1	Japanese social structures	43
2.4.2.2	Self and society	48
2.4.3	Summary	55

CHAPTER 3

	JAPANESE CULTURE REFLECTED IN THE LANGUAGE	57
3.1	Culture bound notions	57
3.1.1	Verbs of giving and receiving	58
3.1.2	Honorifics	62
3.1.2.1	Honorifics and speech levels	62
3.1.2.2	Honorification of nominal elements	66
3.1.2.3	Honorification of predicative elements	71
3.1.2.4	Women's language	78
3.1.3	More expressions of politeness	83
3.1.3.1	Indirect	84
3.1.3.2	Modest	87
3.1.3.3	Repeated expressions	90
3.2	Current analysis of continual changes to language and society	91
3.2.1	Methodology	91
3.2.2	Analysis and conclusion	93
3.2.2.1	Survey of giving and receiving verbs	93
3.2.2.2	Honorifics survey	98
3.2.2.3	Survey of more expressions of politeness	102
3.2.3	General conclusion	109

CHAPTER 4
METHODS OF ACCOMMODATING THE JAPANESE CULTURE AND LANGUAGE	111
4.1 Cultural crossover in language learning	111
4.1.1 Linguistic factor	112
4.1.1.1 Honorifics simplification	112
4.1.1.2 Emphasis of politeness in interactions	114
4.1.2 Cultural and linguistic factor	115
4.1.2.1 Self-assessment exercises	115
4.1.3 Cultural assimilator	119
4.1.4 Field exercises	123
4.2 Summary and implications	124
BIBLIOGRAPHY	127
APPENDIX I	135
APPENDIX II	139
APPENDIX III	142

LIST OF FIGURES, TABLES, DIAGRAMS

Figure 1	Model of interactive competence (Neustupny:1989)	10
Figure 2	A scheme of strategies for linguistic politeness (Hill et al.:1986)	20
Figure 3	The mode of Japanese and American communication (Hijirida & Yoshikawa:1987)	34
Figure 4	The four axes used in honorifics	63
Figure 5*	Comparison of the use of verbs	97
Figure 6*	What do you think about the modest expression, "Nani mo arimasen ga, doozo." ?	104
Table 1	Gender distinction in personal pronouns (Ide:1991)	27
Table 2	Lexical uchi vs. soto , regular conceptual contrasts (Quinn:1994a)	50
Table 3	Giving and receiving verbs	61
Table 4	Family terms	69
Table 5*	Age groups sampled	92
Table 6*	Occupations	92
Table 7*	The summary of question 10 ①	94
Table 8*	The verbs for giving food to a cat	96
Table 9*	To whom do you use honorifics?	98
Table 10*	Personally do you think you use honorifics correctly?	100
Table 11*	Should we change honorifics?	101
Table 12*	What do you think about the modest expression, "Nani mo arimasen ga, doozo." ?	103
Table 13*	Did you realise that Mrs A was complaining?	106
Table 14*	How would you feel about Mrs A's expressions?	107
Diagram 1	Intercultural communication: American style (Barnlund:1975)	37
Diagram 2	Intercultural communication: Japanese style (Barnlund:1975)	37
Diagram 3	The three situational domains	52

SYMBOLS AND ABBREVIATIONS

*	ungrammatical, unacceptable
'	stress
\emptyset	null
COP	copula
D	social distance
DO	direct object
FP	sentence final particle
FTA	face-threatening act
H	hearer, addressee
HON	honorific
ID	indirect object
JSL	Japanese as a second language
Lit	literal
LOC	locative
NEG	negative
OBJ	object
P	power
PAST	past
PLA	plain
POL	polite
POSS	possessive
PRES	present
Q	question
R	rating of imposition
S	speaker
SUB	subject
TOP	topic
V	verb